The pituri is a shrub, or bush, six to 12 feet high, and found only on a ridge of barran sand hills 60 miles wide by 160 to 150 miles long, running in a north to south direction, west of the Mulligam river. In northwestern Queensland, Australia. The nearest civilized point to the pituri district is on the gulf of Carpentaria, which is 650 miles north of it, if grows on the immediate crest of the sand hills. It will not grow on their mides, nor on the slopes of the lowlands, and it has never been found in the valleys between these low, barren ridges. But the meal patches of from three to eight plants. The stem is small. Some of them grow as large as three inches at the butt, and 12 or so feet fall. These large ones are rare, however. GIBSON'S BRAND NEW GIRL.

Illumines the Life Building With Her Smiles.

Gibson has a new girl. The Gibson girl came along the first week in February. She is quite differaris Namne Languorne and the boys are Harry and Keene.

The grandmother's name is "Nannie," so it is not impossible that Nannie-short for the family name of "Anna, held for generations by the Gibson family—will be bestowed upon the new other talent, that of music. She is the owner of a magnificent voice that could easily take her upon the stage in opere, grand or otherwise. It has a marvelous range, is highly cultivated and is probably the finest voice in the world off the stage. She uses it frequently, but only for charity, being much in demand for benefit performances and church musicales. She has never sung for money, all the proceeds being donated to the cause of good works. Mr. Gibson is very tenacious of this voice, and, though he does not object to slyly tucking his wife's beautiful face in his pictures, he most devidedly objects to hanning her voice. Mrs. Gibson, by the way, is only 25 years old, though her powerful figure, her dignity and her beauty make her seem older. Indeed, she has been taken to be the senior of her husbaind, whose birthdays began four years before her own.

The grandmother's name is "Nannie," so it is not impossible that Nannie, so it is not impossible that Nannie, short for the family name of "Ania, held for geherations by the Gisen Langhorne and Langhorne families are the equal of this Gibson gri. It dollars and cenis there might not be an extravagant counting, although both the Gibson and Langhorne families are well placed. The latter is among the "F. F. Vs." of the south, and the Gibson are of a good, aristeratic old family of Comord, N. H. desi not, that cannot given away and that will not stay hidden—the dower of inherited modesty. When Gibson began, in 1839, he had a line way of leaving his sketches at newspaper of fices. "So be accepted if agreeable." The Shrinking Bride.

The Shrinking Bride.

Washington Evening Star: Washington is the Mecca for brides and grooms. One of the last couples who spent the first days of their honeymoon in the capital city left yesterday. The bride was very large and the groom was correspondingly small. At the first meal the groom confided in the elevator boy and told him that his wife was of a very shrinking disposition, so he would please have the clerk send meals to the room. This was done. The groom approached the clerk during the means to the room. This was done I as groom approached the clerk during the afternoon and told him that his wife was of a shrinking nature and did not like to go out the public way, and asked him if there was not a private enit through which they could go to take a carriage drive around the city. The bell was rung quite frequently during their stay and the bride with the shrinking nature became a subject of great curiosity to the help. When they left the porter caught sight of her and stood in open-mouthed astonishment. The clerk angrily asked him what he meant by staring at a guest. "Couldn't help it, nohow, boss. I less hed to look at that shrinkin' pusson. I'd Jess like to know how long she's been shinkin' and what she 'peared like befo' she shrunk."
